The disaster occurred shortly after midnight in latitude 9:30 south, longitude 28:20 west. The Prince Oscar, was bound from Shields, which port she left May 29, for Iquique, laden with coal. She was going at a clipping gait, on the port tack before a brisk wind, and with all canvas set. It is estimated by the crew that she was making about six and a half knots an hour when suddenly there loomed un directly under dealy there loomed up directly under her bows a four-masted vessel. SHOWED NO LIGHTS.

The mate asserts that the stranger ad no lights burning and after she was had no lights burning and after she was tighted it was impossible to alter the word with the faculty, trustees or any-course of the Prince Oscar. The iron hull of the latter struck the unknown full amidship, knocking her almost on her beam ends and crashing them. her beam ends and crashing through the woodwork until her prow was more than half buried. The stranger went over almost on her beams ends, as the l'rince Oscar backed away from the recovered that there was no hope from that source. Life boats were ordered cut adrift and the men were told to jump and swim for their lives. They bell went overheard and with the exjump and swim for their lives. They all went overboard and with the ex-ception of two unfortunats reached the small boats.

LAY BY TILL MORNING.

Captain Henderson, who was the last man to leave the ship, went over in night garments and swam fully two miles before he was picked up. Both boats hovered about the scene of the wreck until daylight in an effort to res-cue the two missing members of the Prince Oscar's crew and any members of the crew of the stranger who might have been fortunate enought to have kept affoat. They found no one how-ever, and nothing to indicate the name, home or destination of their companhome or destination of their compan-ion in misfortune. Finally they left ion in misfortune. Finally they left the scene and headed, they knew not exactly where. Twenty-four hours later a heavy sea struck the boat commanded by Mate Lynch and capsized manded by Mate Lynch and capsized it. The occupants, eight in number, were thrown into the sea and the already overcrowded craft which Captain Henderson commanded put quick by to the rescue. They were successful in getting four of the men on board, the rest were drowned. There were now seventeen men in the small boat with archive to cut nathing to drink. with nothing to eat, nothing to drink and barely room to stretch their limbs. Toward evening of the second day one of the crew discovered a small cask of fish oil stowed away in the boat. This was dealt out to the survivors in small doses and they used it to moisten parched lips and tongues Most of the men were partially naked

They succeeded in attracting the attention of those on board and were soon on her decks. Four days later they, in latitude 16:38 south, longitude 37:31 west, were put aboard the Capac, bound for this port. All of the survivors still bear evidences of the sufferings which they endured.

Mier some persuasion however, Captan Henderson said:

"On the night of July 13, when the callision occurred, I had just turned in leaving the deck in charge of the chief officer. The wind was southwest and squally and there was considerable sea. We were going along possibly six and a half knots an hour with everything set. The mate saw nothing of the approaching vessel until she was almost on top of us and he positively asserts that she was without side lights. She had every stitch of canvass set and was jumping through the water at a lively rate. Consequently when both vessels came together the crash was terrific and the damage was sufficient to cause both to go to the bottom withterrine and the damage as summer to cause both to go to the bottom within ten minutes. Not a sound came from those on board the unknown ship and at the expiration of five minutes the tops of her masts were seen sinking beneath the surface of the water." Captain Henderson is well advanced ears and has followed the sea since ore boy, this being his first accident to Kallias Bey, a Grecian general.

San Francisco, Aug. 8 .- An eighth juror was obtained to try Theodore Durrant for murder at the forenoon sion of the superior court. He is P. F. Hooper, a lumber merchant, and like all his fellow jurors stands high in the community. An unusually large crowd thronged the corridors of the city hall in the expectation that some action would be taken in the threatened contempt proceedings against certain newspapers for interviewing jurers regarding ther standing in the case. After a number of veniremen had been examined, one of the defendant's attorneys presented a bundle of affidavits from his client and asked that citations be issued for the editor and city editors of the Chronicle and the Examiner. The attorney also asked for further time to prepare affidavits concern-ing jurymen which he considered in contempt of court. The court stated that he would consider the matter carefully before deciding the question of issuing the citation asked for. Nothing was said concerning Jurors Browne and Nathan who allowed themselves to be interviewed and discussed the case with reporters despite the court's express commands to the contrary.
